CBSV WORKBOOK

Name: ✎ _____

ID number: ✎ _____

Communities: ✎ _____

Ten things to remember:

1. Actively look for all pregnant women in your community.
2. Conduct the first visit as early in pregnancy as possible.
3. Include all relevant family members in the visits.
4. Use the CBSV cards to guide your visits.
5. Ensure you understand and remember the content of the visits. Review your manual, attend the re-trainings and ask questions whenever you are unsure.
6. Don't just give information, problem solve. Identify any barriers the family has trying or maintaining the behaviors by listening and asking questions.
7. Try to visit on the day of delivery. Actively look for delivered women and ensure that the family knows the importance of calling you on the day of delivery.
8. Remember you are not alone - your supervisor is there to help.
9. Keep your materials safe and clean and keep your records up to date.
10. Keep motivated – you are working for the good of your community.

How to use the workbook

The workbook aims to help you remember any important information about the family, referrals you have made, appointments and upcoming visits. Keep the records in your workbook as complete and up to date as possible.

Section 1: Pregnant woman and visit record

As soon as you locate a pregnant woman record her in this section. There is space to record the woman's name (as written on her ObaapaVitA card), her ObaapaVitA ID number, the date you identified her and the age of the pregnancy. If the woman is not sure of the pregnancy age you can use the calendar to help her estimate. There is also space to mark completed visits. When you complete a visit tick the box for that visit. This should help you keep track of which visits you have conducted.

Section 2: Referrals

Whenever you refer a very small or sick baby to the hospital you must complete the referral section of your workbook. There is space to record the name of the mother, the date referred, the age of the baby (in days) and the reason for referral. You can use this list to remind yourself to check on referred babies

Section 3: Notes and comments

Use this section to record information that is important to remember for the next visit. For example it could be a list of key family members to include in the visit, a note about a specific problem a family has with a behavior and the solution you negotiated to solve the problem. Start each note with the woman's name and the date. You should also record any issues that you want to discuss with your supervisor or at the group CBSV meeting.

Section 4: Supervisor's section

This section is filled in by your supervisor at the end of their visit. It helps the supervisor remember what happened at each visit.

Section 5: Calendar and diary

This section has a year and a month calendar. The year calendar helps you schedule the next visit to a family. The month calendar is to mark the date of scheduled visits. You will also mark this on the family card. There is space remember to record the name of the woman, where she lives and whether you have arranged to visit in the morning, afternoon or evening. You can also remind yourself when to start checking if the woman has delivered by mark when she will enter the last weeks of pregnancy.

You can also use the month calendar to record key events such as upcoming supervisory visits, CBSV group meetings or trainings.
